> Famous Recentacle for Convicts. The Prison Odor The Apparent Lack of Strength in Visible Government. A prison interior has a strange, mor bid fascination for the average freeman

There is such a general atmosphere of weird unreality about it all, accentuated by the sternest realities of an iron disci-pline. From the burly, hard faced guard, who leans upon his shining Win hester in the sentry hox on the walls. to the pale consumptive murderer, whose hacking cough is the only sound that breaks the stillness of the prison has pital, everybody and thing is strange.y different from the outer world. Hundreds of silent, striped suited convicts bending over their workbeinches, walking about the yard with arms folded or marching in lockstep with eyes averted, surround the visitor on every side.

There is a peculiar odor born both by the prison apartments and by the prison inmates which is as marked and distinctive as the odor of the hospital or of the steerage. It tells of a life of torpid ity, barren of sunshine and of change. It tells of utensils and cells made state and foul with constant usage in spite of and four with constant usage in spite of endless scrubbing and rinsing. The prison is one gipat have of yellow, close cropped, hanglog looking by manity, speaking to their keepers or to their companion laborers at rare intervals and in subclued tones, but possessed of some secret freemasoury and means of communication with one another and with the outside world that baffles the mos rigid discipling and searching increasi The thing that strikes the visitor from the outer world most is the apparent weakness of the governing power. A hundred convicts armed with kn vestwo feet long and sharpas razors are cutting out great piles of cothing in a room guarded by half a dozen apparently unarmed seepe s. Another company of surlymalefactors are plying the hammer and chief ir a stone yard, mingling with handful of guards whose skul s could be split in 57e seconds after the giving of a preconcertee, signal. It is, the vast but maseen slumbering power of the state that holds them; the knowledge of the keen sighted, iron nerved marksmen on the outer walls, whose repeating rifles carry seventern lives apiece, and the hopeieseness of flight to a world where every man's hand would be against them, even temporary success could only end in death or lengthened punishment Principa Keeper Connaughton, of Sing Sing prison, has spent seventeen years of his life among convicts and never car-

Among the curiosities of every prison are the famous convicts, notorious mu-derers, fallen bank presidents, clever derea, fallen bank presidents, clever swindlers and romantic desperadoes of every type. The oldest prisoner is also trotted out for inspection by the specially fa ored; some old, white haired, pale face I man, who for twoscore years perhajis has not looked beyon! the prison wills, stands blinking before the visitors. When he left the wor'd the civil war was unfought. France was an empire, Jermany a mass of disorgan. empire, iermany a mass of disorgan-ized stat s. Have you ever been haunted by an ad-I have thed out of people that ques-tion and they nearly all tell he that they have undergone such an experence at one time or another.

The par cular "ad" that haunts me is one conta ning the picture of a man's face. A very insipid face it is, too, with an absolutely, perfect black mustache attached to it. It has a grewsome effect, too, as there is to neck visibly attached to the head, and I have often wondered if it would be possible to cut a man's head off so that rone of the neck would

This face persists in getting ir front of me and staring at me with those meek eyes. No matter which end of an elevated cur I go in just as soon as I am comfortably seated in a seat i can feel that face looking at me; and some enough there it always is—above the windows directly across the car If 1 open the advert sing pages of a maga-zine that 'ace will be the first thing to meet my eve. Or, the street I am always seeing it on the billboards or some advertising lodger.

You may say that this is all very easily explained by the fact of the advertisement being a very common one that every body would be running against. On the contrary it is rather of an uncommon one, but wherever it is I am sure to find it. I don't know what the article is the face advertises, and I don't want to. I only want to be freed from the negatimate of that mask.—New York Her.id.

Almest 0 to Hundred Miles an Hour.

What is believed to be the fastest time on record vas made by a compound locamotive of the Vanclain type on the Bound Brook route between Philadel, line and New York on Priday evening, Nov. 18. The Lecono.ive, No. 385, was attached to the regr. ar 5:15 p. m. express from Philadelphra, which consisted of four care. A num ben of sery rapid rame of several miles were made. Between Jenkintows and Yardiny five successive miles were run in 333 seconds; or at the rate of eighty-fig ramiles per hour, and near Resheminy a mile were made in thirty-nine assonds.

The record was broken, however, between Plainfield and I handle on the line of the Contra delificad of New Jersey, where, one mile was run in thirty-seven seconds, and two successive miles in seventy-five seconds, or at the rate of hinety seven miles per hour. The sanging which it at a thir extraordinary record weights (33,800 sounds without tender, and arrive 68,60 pounds of it on the drivers, this streeting seventy.

How the Scripture: West Preserved Pre-vious to Their Translation.

The books of the law were the first oks of the Bible to be collected by the ests and leaders of the Israelites; after the law came the written history of the A Visat to Sing Sing, New York State's people, in the Fifth century B. C., the collection of the prophets by Nehemiah; and from his time anward the collection of hagingrapha, the Paalma, Proverbs, Job, Canticles. All of these had been ale, in the Fifth century B. C., the preserved by the priests, copied and re-copied as occasion required, and circu-lated in manuscripts, as of course all writings were circulated in those days. The dispersion of the Hebrews and their acquisition of other languages and loss of the Hebrew language, necessitated the translation of the Scriptures into ther than the Hebrew, and previous to the Second century B. C. what we know as the Septuagint translation—the LXX—was completed in Greek, designed especially for the Hebrews living in Alex andria and other parts of Egypt. The Septuagint comes from a tradition that seventy scholars-seventy-two actually made the translation. Translations at 0 recensions into the Aramaic were also made, and these translations were copied from time to time, so that the oldest manuscript of the Old Testament now extant is only about 1,400 years of The case is the same with the New Testament. It was written again and again, until now there are upward of 1,000 manuscripts for the Gospels and as many more for the rest of the New Tes tament. The oldest manuscripts are the Codex Sinsitions and the Codex Vaticaone which date from the Fourth century A. D. So the books of the Bib e were handed down, the old copies always beng renewed before they wore cut, the language being Hebrew, Greek and after A. D. 300. Latin. The latter, in the translation adopted by the Roman church, and known as the Vulgate, because com-monly used in the Christian churches, was the first book printed, in 1456-5.

As far back as the Seventh century

As far back as the Seventh Century portions of the Vulgate were translated into English, and the early versions by Wyclif and his predecessors, by Purvey and others, were translations from the Vulgate. Tyndalo nsed Lather's Communications of the Communication o German translation of the Greek Bible. The authorized version of King Jame? was made by forty seven scholars and finished in 1611; the manuscripts, so fa: as accessible, were consulted, the translators not restricting themselves to the Vulgate, but go ng to the Habrew and Greek whenever they could,-Pittsburg A "Character" in France

What Men and Women Tell. There is one radical difference between nen and women that "it may be said generally of novelists, that men anow more than they tell, and w more than they know." It may be true of novelists. In real life neither tells all he or she knows, and the difference shows in what they keep.
